Following Albert Tucker's death in 1999, the responsibility, legacy and management of their estate fell to Barbara. When Barbara sadly passed away in May 2015, she left explicit instructions in her will that the long-cherished dream of both she and Albert be fulfilled – the creation of a charitable trust to be known as the Albert & Barbara Tucker Foundation.

Their individual creative, humanitarian and environmental interests are represented by the key causes to be supported by the trust, and include the support, promotion, development and advancement of public art galleries and museums, the relief of poverty and the suffering of children, the protection of women from abuse, by supporting women in abusive circumstances and by assisting them to further their education, and the initiation and support of any social change which goes towards increasing the equal treatment and social acceptance of all persons in the community.

SALE PROCEEDS TO BENEFIT THE ALBERT & BARBARA TUCKER FOUNDATION

Each work in the exhibition has been drawn from the personal collection of Albert and Barbara Tucker, including numerous works that have never previously been available for public sale. The proceeds will benefit important social causes, including the initiation of social change which supports the equal treatment and social acceptance of all persons in the community.

Albert Tucker is known as one of Australia's foremost artists, and as a key figure in the development of Australian modernism. Primarily a figurative painter, his works responded to the world around him and his own life experiences, and they often reflected critically on society.

Geoffrey Smith, Chairman of Smith & Singer commented: 'Albert Tucker's visual vocabulary, that found its origins in the disruptive traumas created by the Second World War, forms part of the revolutionary iconography that not only changed the course of Australian art but also profoundly influenced successive generations during the second half of the twentieth century and beyond. Smith & Singer is honoured to present these works for exhibition and sale and welcomes visitors to our Sydney galleries this October.'
